Bull Breeding Soundness Examination

18 May 2012

Course Instructor is Darrell Irwin MRCVS

On many farms the stock bull is often presumed to be fertile. However, experience shows that a significant number of bulls are sub/in fertile which is costing your clients time and money.

Aspects of Bull Fertility covered include: anatomy, physiology, physical examination, semen collection (AV and Electro-ejaculation) and semen evaluation.

Our Bull Breeding Soundness Examination Courses are delivered over one day and include an opportunity to examine bulls on farm and get the opportunity to practice semen collection. This on-farm environment gives a relaxed training atmosphere.

If you are interested, but undecided, please contact us and we can talk to you or put you in touch with a past student to hear a first hand account of the course.
